J. Grievance Management

1. Incarcerated people may be placed on grievance management for an initial period of not more than 90 calendar days if they abuse or misuse the grievance process by:
 - a) Filing an excessive number of grievances (more than four) in a 30-day period;
 - b) Filing multiple grievances or grievance appeals about the same issue or about multiple individuals regarding the same issue;
 - c) Filing multiple grievances and/or grievance appeals raising non-grievable issues;
 - d) Filing grievances or grievance appeals that are vague, frivolous, or intended to harass; or
 - e) Filing repeated grievances or grievance appeals that continually meet the return criteria in section B of the policy.
2. A recommendation to place an incarcerated person on grievance management may be submitted only by the facility grievance authority and must include a list of the grievances forming the basis and reason for the recommendation. The assistant commissioner or designee, or deputy commissioner of the client services and supports division, determines when grievance management is appropriate.
3. Once placed on grievance management, an incarcerated person is immediately notified in writing of the determination, including a list of grievances upon which the determination was based.
4. While on grievance management, an incarcerated person may submit emergency grievances only to the facility grievance coordinator for review and approval by the warden or designee, assistant commissioner of facilities, or deputy commissioner of the client services and supports division, before they may be filed, accepted, and processed.
 - a) The incarcerated person filing the grievance must designate the grievance as an emergency on the Facility Grievance form.
 - b) The incarcerated person must demonstrate the factors creating a substantial risk of physical injury or other serious, irreparable harm to the incarcerated person if the emergency grievance is processed according to standard time limits.
 - c) When an incarcerated person is filing an emergency grievance, the normal chain of command requirements are waived. For further details, see section G of the policy.
 - d) If an incarcerated person on grievance management submits emergency grievances that are non-emergency, as determined by the warden or designee, assistant commissioner of facilities, or deputy commissioner of the client services and supports division, grievance management may be extended by 30 days for each submitted non-emergency grievance.
 - e) The warden or designee, assistant commissioner of facilities, or deputy commissioner of the client services and supports division determines if the proposed emergency grievance meets the threshold for an emergency grievance. The facility grievance coordinator must notify the incarcerated person if the proposed emergency grievance has been accepted and, if not, the reasons for denial.
