DEFINITION OF TERMS

Project Abstract - The Project Abstract should serve as a succinct description of the proposed work and should be no more than 400 words.

Introduction - Sets the stage for the project. It provides a research and/or policy context for the topic to be studied, and along with the Literature Review, tie the issue in to a national perspective.

Literature Review - This section should clearly demonstrate the author(s) familiarity and expertise with existing research or background. This section should be a synthesis of past research and may draw on recent summary reviews. It should also discuss how the proposed project would contribute to the body of research and practice. The topics reviewed should reflect the themes presented in the proposal.

Example: If the proposal concerns evaluation of a drug treatment program, both the treatment and the evaluation literature should be discussed.

Example: If the research concerns developing a prediction instrument for classifying serious offenders in confinement, the research to be reviewed would include that concerning prediction instruments and custodial classification.

Statement of the Research or Project Question - Outlines specifically what the proposal intends to accomplish. Succinct goals (usually one sentence each), associated objectives, or hypotheses to be tested are listed and described.

Expected Benefits - Details what benefits will accrue from the project for basic research (theory or method), policy discussion or practice, or any other expected benefits.

Risk Minimization – Details what efforts have been made to minimize potential risk to participants and/or MN DOC.

Research or Project Design and Methodology - Method of research used and the manner in which research or project will be done, including intended subject or data pool with selection criteria clearly stated.

Project Management

Staffing and Management - The specific staff who will conduct the research or project are delineated, as are their roles and time allocations. New staff to be hired are indicated with qualifications noted.

Tasks and Timelines - List major milestones of events, activities and products. A timetable for the completion of individual project tasks is developed.

Confidentiality Agreement - Applicants should describe their plans to protect sensitive information. Applicants who do not intend to undertake primary data collection on individual subjects should so indicate.

Informed Consent - Applicant drafted document. Individual research or project subjects participating in the research or project must sign consent form

Some of the items you may wish to outline in your Informed Consent Form include:

- How the research or project data will be used?
- How will the research or project data impact the research subject?
- Any risk and/or discomforts the research or project subject may encounter?
- Voluntary withdrawal from the research or project study?
- Any alternative procedures or course of treatment that may be found as a result of the research or project?
- Will there be a degree of confidentiality the research or project subject will have?
- What sources are available to provide information to me (research or project subject) in the event I have questions?
